On 6 December PENG Te-huai, commander of the Chinese People's Volunteer Army in Korea, sent the following report on the Korean war situation to the Chinese Communist central government authorities:

- a. The Chinese Communist front line propaganda has succeeded in lowering the morale of the allied soldiers during the drawn-out peace negotiations.
 - b. By 5 December two-thirds of the foreign Communist troops in Korea had been evacuated; they were replaced by Chinese Communist troops.¹ Very few casualties were suffered from allied bombing during these troop movements.
 - c. Most of the non-Communist guerrillas and agents in North Korea have been wiped out and their activities no longer hamper the Communist war effort.
1. [REDACTED] Comment. The evacuation of foreign Communist troops was mentioned [REDACTED] However, this should not be considered confirmation, as the information came from the same source.
